COAST ARTILLERY IN PENNSYLVANIA

Plans outlined by the Division of Militia Affairs, War Department, for the organization of heavy coast artillery in cities which may be regarded as seaports, is of particular interest to the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

It will be remembered that Harry C. Hale, Lieutenant Colonel, Infantry, Acting Chief, Division of Militia Affairs, at the last meeting of the National Guard Association, advocated the organization of six companies of coast artillery from Pennsylvania. The remarks of Colonel Hale made a decided favorable impression at the time, and officers of the Guard were pronounced in their laudation of the recommendations.

Colonel Hale has been giving the proposition of a more definite militia organization of coast artillery considerable attention during the past few months, and is now hopeful that his plans for this important acquisition to the service will become a reality in the near future.

Owing to its high standard of efficiency, much is expected of the National Guard of Pennsylvania in the efforts of the national authorities to better insure the coast defense.

It is known that Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart regards the plans of the Bureau of Militia Affairs as of the utmost importance, and is giving the matter great consideration.

Naturally Philadelphia would be expected to contribute one regiment to the new branch of the service, while it is probable that several of the interior cities with water frontage might serve as fields for recruits. Under this latter interpretation of coast defense, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre, Pittsburgh, Allentown, and Easton could be called upon for details.

It would be regarded as more probable, however, that an entire regiment would be taken from Philadelphia, and the gap caused by its removal from the infantry filled through a reorganization of the Guard so as to return the Fourteenth Regiment back into one of the brigades.

Colonel Hale is also anxious to have a complement of field artillery organized in compliance with the present regulations. This plan is said to have the hearty approval of General Price and Colonel Howard S. Williams, Chief of Ordnance.

Captain Ralph Knowles, of the Sixth Infantry, has recently taken up the matter of organizing a battery of field artillery in Germantown, where it is believed that there is an excellent opportunity to obtain desirable members among the young men of that suburban section. It is believed that the business men's associations of that district would assist a movement of this character.

Colonel Williams has held several conferences with Captain Knowles and others interested in the proposed organization, and it is probable that efforts of a definite nature will be made in the near future.

In line with these important developments, it has become known that several of the infantry regiments of the Guard have taken steps to organize machine-gun companies. This is particularly true of the Second, Ninth, and Tenth Regiments.

In the latest issue of the Bulletin of Militia Affairs from the Division of Militia Affairs, Colonel Hale outlined his plans for the use of machine guns as follows:

"Machine Guns.—The issue of machine guns has not been encouraged on account of the modifications that were taking place in the current model. These modifications have now been completed, however, and hereafter it will be the policy of the War Department to develop and cultivate the organization of machine gun units so far as conditions will permit. Such units should not be added to regiments until the minimum prescribed organization shall have been provided and storage facilities completed for the housing and preservation of the guns and provision made for their proper care. The Division of Militia Affairs will, whenever its investigation justifies the procedure, lend every effort to further the creation of such organization and will supply the equipment from unallotted funds.

"The organization prescribed for this unit in the army at present is imperfect. It is of being a separate and thirteenth organization in the regiment it is a platoon composed of details from the several companies of the regiment. On account of the imperfection of this organization and the probability of its being immediately changed upon entering into active service, special authority was obtained from the Secretary of War and has already been published, giving authority for the organization of machine gun companies in the Organized Militia as a thirteenth company, giving it the same personnel as the other companies of the regiment. While this is the correct idea for this unit, and is therefore authorized for the Organized Militia in time of peace, it should be remembered that in case of active service the present law would not permit such additional organization to be called into service of the United States for the reason that it would not conform to the organization of machine-gun platoons in the Regular Army. To obviate this difficulty, therefore, it is suggested that when machine-gun companies are organized in militia regiments under the special authority of the Secretary of War referred to above, that the enlisted personnel thereof should be members of other organizations of the regiment, and be considered as additional strength of the organization to which they belong, and that the commissioned personnel should be detailed from the regimental and battalion staff. In this way if called into the service of the United States, this machine-gun unit could come in immediately under the law, and once in, could then be made an independent and thirteenth company as soon as the law authorized it—which it is believed would be very shortly."

Plans for the organization of a company of coast artillery are announced in another bulletin of the division as follows:

I. The Regulations for the Organized Militia, 1910, are amended to read as follows:

Paragraph 239: Company of Coast Artillery.—Each company of Coast Artillery of the Organized Militia shall consist of:

- 1 captain,
- 1 first lieutenant,
- 1 second lieutenant,
- 1 first sergeant,
- 1 quartermaster sergeant,
- 2 cooks,
- 2 mechanics,
- 2 musicians, and not less than
- 4 sergeants,
- 6 corporals, and
- 45 privates.

Total: Three commissioned officers and 63 enlisted men.

The number of sergeants and corporals authorized for a company of coast artillery which consists of more than 63 enlisted men is proportional to the total enlisted strength of the company and shall not exceed the number of sergeants and corporals stated in the following table:

Total enlisted strength of company.	Total number of sergeants.	Total number of corporals.
63 to 67 inclusive	4	6
68 to 77 inclusive	5	7
78 to 86 inclusive	6	8
87 to 96 inclusive	7	10
97 to 104 inclusive	8	12

The maximum enlisted strength of a company of coast artillery of the Organized Militia shall be 104.

If at any time the total enlisted strength of a company is decreased below the limits stated in the foregoing table the number of sergeants and corporals will be reduced accordingly.

Each coast artillery band shall consist of:

- 1 chief musician,
- 1 chief trumpeter,
- 1 principal musician,
- 1 drum major,
- 4 sergeants,
- 8 corporals,
- 1 cook, and
- 11 privates.

II. The following paragraph is added to the Militia Regulations, 1910:

126a. No clothing which is in serviceable condition will be dropped from the returns under Section 13 of the Militia Law. All unserviceable clothing on hand which has been dropped from the returns under Section 13 of the Militia Law and all clothing hereafter dropped in this manner will be destroyed. On and after January 1, 1914, all lists of clothing dropped from the returns under the provisions of Section 13 of the Militia Law (Form 27, Division of Militia Affairs), which are filed as vouchers to the returns, will be accompanied by affidavits from commissioned officers on the active list of the Organized Militia to the effect that the clothing so dropped was unserviceable and had been destroyed in their presence. These affidavits will not be required in the case of clothing dropped from the returns during the calendar year 1913.

Much credit for the great interest developed in the Guard in regard to the artillery branch of the service is due to Colonel Howard S. Williams, Chief of Ordnance. Colonel Williams has been an untiring worker, and his splendid enthusiasm has been productive of great results for the service. His career in the Guard has been a record of achievements and of great value to the commonwealth.

COLONEL HOWARD S. WILLIAMS.

Colonel Howard S. Williams was born at Williams' Corner, Chester county, Pa., on August 22, 1874. He is of Welsh descent, and is the son of B. Franklin Williams, who served three years in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company K, Fourth Pennsylvania Reserves, and was acting clerk of the Fourth and Fifth Corps. His mother was Josephine Stephens Williams. Captain Williams was mustered into the National Guard as First Lieutenant of Battery F, June 16, 1898, and was transferred to Battery C, as Quartermaster in the following November. He was elected First Lieutenant on April 24, 1903, and Captain, October 24, 1904. Captain Williams is regarded as one of the most efficient officers of the Guard, and has made a thorough success as Commander of Battery C. He is an artillery officer of the new school, and his progressive ideas have contributed much to the development of that splendid body of men. The personnel of Battery C is of the very highest, a goodly proportion of the members being engineers and professional men. The fine standing of the Battery is largely due to the personal influence of the popular and able commander. Colonel Williams was appointed Justice of the Peace in August, 1896, and succeeded himself by election in 1897. He was elected Burgess of the borough of Phoenixville in 1904. Colonel Williams is Past Master of Phoenix Lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M.; Past High Priest, Commandery No. 15, K. T.; member of Palestine Council, No. 8, Royal and Select Masons; of Lu Lu Temple and Bloomsburg Consistory, Thirty-second Degree. He is also a member of Phoenix Camp, Sons of Veterans. Colonel Williams is Real Estate Officer of the American Pipe and Construction Company of Philadelphia. He is also a director of the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank, of Phoenixville, and of the Phoenixville Publishing Company.

NEED FOR THE GUARD.

The Journal takes great pleasure in reproducing an article of unusual value, entitled "National Guard and National Defense, with Special Reference to the Sanitary Service," written by Dr. Gustavus M. Blech, of Chicago, for "The Military Surgeon."

When Japan attacked Russia some eight years ago, there were few who did not believe that the mighty, disciplined Muscovite million army would drive its yellow antagonist into the sea. But the converse obtained and no civilized nation can afford to ignore the great tragedy in Manchuria, because of the many valuable lessons it teaches modern nations.

In our land we can boast of as fine a mobile army as can be found anywhere on this globe, though as compared with the population and the territory of our land it is also one of the smallest—too small, indeed, to cut much figure, unsupported, in a conflict with a first-class military power. Our chief hope, therefore, rests on our citizen soldiery available as a national volunteer army at call.

It follows that to be able successfully to co-operate with the regular army the National Guard must be at all times in as high a state of efficiency as can be achieved under present existing conditions.

Before the Spanish-American War the National Guard was little better than a uniformed social organization, and accordingly was not taken very seriously by the people.

Insignificant as was the Cuban campaign in comparison with the Civil War, it proved a sufficiently strong object lesson to show the thinking American that neither our territorial size nor our great industrial and economic successes are in themselves sufficient to cope with an antagonistic army of magnitude. The American people learned the bitter lesson that in war, bullets are not the only things to be reckoned with for casualty lists, and that even the most patriotic force of young men in uniforms will not avail if they have not been properly trained to withstand the rigors of a campaign, and if their sanitary, supply and engineering services are not properly organized. Profiting by this experience the government has improved the military status of the National Guard and given it material and moral support.

Our busy, dollar-hunting, peace-loving people, however, continue in their lethargy as they did before the war with Spain. Secure in our oceanic separation from Europe and Asia, at peace with our neighbors north and south, history has repeated itself, and again the sword has been turned into a ploughshare.

But the fact remains that we are likely to be awakened from our peaceful slumber when least expected, for a nation that in the past fifteen years has established colonies practically at the end of the world, must not be deluded with the hope that it will be able to settle all international difficulties by diplomatic circumlocution. If the general populace, especially the younger men, were fully to realize what this means, the National Guard would not be handicapped, as it now is, by a dearth of suitable men.

Liability to military duty is a subject with which the average American young man is least familiar, yet he feels he is within his rights to ignore everything military until war is declared. Even though there be no law compelling our youths to give up a little time and energy in preparing themselves for national defense as part payment for the benefits derived from the nation, I feel that very many young men could be drawn into the ranks of the National Guard, were those in power willing to make the service as attractive as possible. By this I do not mean parades, dances, festivals or plumes, but by showing on all possible occasions the esteem held for those who volunteer for service in time of peace. Human nature is much the same throughout the world. In Germany, France, Austria and Switzerland the soldier is popular with his civilian friends. In Russia military service is thoroughly disliked, and the private is far from popular with the members of the civil community. In England, as here, the people are indifferent. One has but to study conditions in the countries named to find the key which will make the calling of a soldier attractive.

The opposition by unions of workingmen is a real problem which has been too long neglected. I feel confident that a well directed propaganda will convince the organized labor world that the National Guard is its friend and not its enemy.

Now let us glance at the officers—the leaders. In the regular army the selection of officers represents a problem involving much care, labor and scrutiny, and while the same standard cannot be set for National Guard officers, much can be done to make the tests very rigid. The fact that men join a military organization and after a few months are elected to office and commissioned can lead to but two conclusions: either that popularity with men and superiors is the prime requisite for a commission, or that little knowledge in tactics, regulations, management, etc., is required to pass an examination.

ADJUTANT GENERAL, LIEUTENANT COLONEL DAVID J. DAVIS,

Veteran of the Spanish-American War, distinguished jurist of Scranton, and famous authority on military laws.

The higher the office, the greater the responsibility, and correspondingly the greater the experience and knowledge the aspirant to office should possess. I am informed that in some States Governors are allowed to appoint brigadier generals and other general officers without any other qualification than the executive's wish. While undoubtedly no Governor would be short-sighted enough to entrust the command of a brigade to a man without experience, public policy demands that each executive be bound to follow some law prescribing the necessary qualifications. Personal or political affiliations have no place in the military. The German saying, that he whom God favors with an office also will be favored with brains, I have always looked upon as sarcasm unalloyed. And this brings me back to the Manchurian campaign. It has been said on behalf of Russia that the campaign in Manchuria was merely a colonial war and that Russia was handicapped by limited transportation facilities; all of which is true. What is not so well known, however, but is true, nevertheless,

Sanitary Service.

The time has gone by when the military surgeon is looked down upon by the rest of the military family as a mere doctor in uniform. His military rank is no longer regarded as a superfluous decoration, but has a vital significance. It is being recognized now that a well-regulated sanitary service is as essential, if not more so, as the supply service or that of any other staff corps. I question, however, whether this appreciation of modern sanitary service has permeated all National Guard circles.

The sooner line and staff officers of the National Guard realize

GETTYSBURG AFTERMATH.

In a recent issue, the Confederate Veteran, under the caption "The Man Who Managed at Gettysburg," paid the following tribute to the well-known National Guardsman:

In connection with the great gathering of veterans from the two armies who made that battlefield second in fame to no other in history, Confederates will read with interest a sketch of the man who was most active in bringing to its great success the marvelous and happy event. Lieutenant Colonel Lewis E. Beitler (pronounced as Biteler), born in the central war days (October 4, 1863), is the man referred to. He was educated in the Philadelphia public schools and took a partial course in the law school of the University of Civilian physicians, too, must learn to appreciate that the mere donning of a uniform does not transform a medical practitioner into a medical officer. Army organization, for the purpose of preventing disease and properly evacuating the sick and wounded to institutions on the lines of communication, is a science in itself and must be thoroughly studied. To be a cog in the great wheel of army organization the medical officer, like his comrades of the line, must know something of the great machine he is to serve. As he is likely to be called on to undertake certain sanitary-tactical moves he must know about the physical aspects of modern warfare. He must be able to make and interpret maps, to read and carry out military orders, to guard the interests of the army, the government and the injured or disabled in a spirit of equity, and finally he must know the minutest details of the organization and equipment of all medical stations and institutions in the field.

In spite of all these requirements we repeatedly have seen medical men appointed chief surgeons and surgeons-general in recognition of professional services rendered an official or his family, or possibly because the appointee happened to be popular with the medical profession.

If it is true that the sanitary service is organized to aid fighting

Pennsylvania. He entered public life as private secretary to Edwin H. Fitler, Mayor of Philadelphia, April, 1887-91, and continued as private secretary to Mayor Edwin S. Stuart from 1891 to 1895, resigning to become private secretary to Daniel H. Hastings, Governor of Pennsylvania, January, 1895-99. On March 1, 1899, he was appointed by Governor Stone as Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, continuing as such throughout that administration, being reappointed by Governor Pennypacker in January, 1903, and by Governor Stuart in January, 1907, and resigning under Governor Tener March 1, 1911.

He was appointed Field Secretary for the Battle of Gettysburg Commission in December, 1911, and Secretary in July, 1912. As Field Secretary he visited during January, February, and March, 1912, the Governors and addressed the legislatures of all the States whose General Assemblies were then in session—viz., South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey—extending Pennsylvania's invitation to join with her and the National Government in the celebration.

In March, 1912, he appeared before the Joint Congressional Committee, to urge the necessary legislation before Congress, and followed same until it was enacted into a law by President Taft's signature, August 26, 1912, whereby Pennsylvania guaranteed $150,000, and the National Government then appropriated a similar amount and authorized and directed the War Department with the $300,000 thus set apart to create and maintain the great camp at Gettysburg.

This $300,000 appearing on June 20 last to the present Secretary of War adequate to provide for but forty thousand veterans, he advised Pennsylvania that no provision for the care and entertainment of any above that number could nor would be made unless Pennsylvania assumed the entire cost for every veteran above that number. Ascertaining from the War Department officials then on duty at Gettysburg that approximately $25,000 or $35,000 more from Pennsylvania would be needed, an emergency appropriation bill carrying $35,000 was immediately introduced in the closing hour of her General Assembly and unanimously passed at 6 A. M. Saturday, June 28, the legislature then adjourning sine die at 12 o'clock noon, thus making Pennsylvania's appropriation for the care and entertainment of her guests and the transportation and care and entertainment of her own veterans total $450,000, an amount her General Assemblies of 1909, 1911, and 1913 approved without a dissenting vote.

He was appointed Major and A. D. C. Division Staff, N. G. P., in 1900, Lieutenant Colonel and Division Ordnance Officer, N. G. P., in 1904, Lieutenant Colonel and A. D. C. to Governor Pennypacker in 1905, Lieutenant Colonel and A. D. C. to Governor Stuart in 1907, and now continues as Lieutenant Colonel and Aide-de-Camp to Governor Tener.

As Secretary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission he became the executive officer thereof in Pennsylvania and in its relations to Colonel Beitler was active and unreserved in combating the incorrect report circulated and revived again and again that the Confederate flag and the gray uniforms would be objectionable at Gettysburg. In every way he showed absolutely impartial consideration of these things.

In recent general orders, Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers, of the Grand Army of the Republic declared:

The Gettysburg celebration was a grand success from every point of view. It is estimated that more than fifty thousand veterans were in attendance. The United Confederate Veterans were largely represented and took an active part. Your Commander-in-Chief and Bennett H. Young, Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, spoke from the same platform at the first meeting on the first day, July 1, 1913, and gave the keynote of welcome and patriotism which permeated the whole celebration. The utmost harmony prevailed. The boys in blue and the boys in gray fraternized together as though they had never been engaged in warfare against each other, and parted the best of friends.

all the other commonwealths, States, and territories, and to the National Government.

At Gettysburg on the evening of July 3, 1913, on the Pennsylvania College campus, where fifty years before the two armies had met in desperate, deadly conflict, he was presented a medal of gold by his associates of the Pennsylvania Commission and a silver loving cup and an album bound in blue and gray and gold by the representatives of the Pennsylvania Commission from all the States in the Union, the album containing an address to him prepared by Colonel Andrew Cowan, of Kentucky, and signed by all the representatives, each of whom also contributed an autograph personal letter likewise bound therein. The inscription upon the loving cup, which was presented by Colonel Edward O. Shelton, of Massachusetts, is:

"To Lieut. Col. Lewis E. Beitler, Secretary
Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission,
Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration of the Battle of Gettysburg,
July 1-4, 1913.

A mark of esteem and appreciation of his services
In making the great celebration possible.

The declarations of attachment to the Union and the flag by the speakers and members of both organizations were universal. The walls of prejudice and enmity, if any had existed, were broken down, and each army vied with the other in patriotism and friendliness. The good results of this meeting to our country at large are incalculable, and will be felt more and more as time goes on.

The celebration was made possible by the magnificent liberality of the State of Pennsylvania, which appropriated about four hundred and fifty thousand dollars for that purpose and to aid its veterans, while the United States Government contributed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and the services of troops in establishing and maintaining the camp.

The Grand Army, through its efficient committee, of which Past Commander-in-Chief Eli Torrance was chairman, aided largely in making the celebration a success. The work of preparing for such a celebration and constructing and carrying on a camp of such proportions was a Herculean task, and great credit is due the commission acting in behalf of the State of Pennsylvania and the officers of the Regular Army having the camp in their charge.

While distinctions are invidious, it is but justice to say that the credit for the laborious work of preparing the camp and the entertainment of the veterans is due to the energy, perseverance, and self-sacrificing efforts of Major Normoyle and Major Grove, of the Regular Army, in immediate charge of that work; while the work of Secretary of the Commission was performed by Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, who won the commendation of every one for his activity, energy, and suavity in the discharge of the delicate and many times trying duties of his office.

GEORGE ORMROD, CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY.

Among the prominent and representative citizens of Allentown who are greatly interested in the welfare of the military establishment is George Ormrod, one of the leaders in that progressive city. For many years he was connected with the coal industries in the anthracite region, and was president of the St. Nicholas and Girard Coal Companies. In 1880 he removed to Allentown, and identified himself with the Donaldson Iron Co., located at Emaus, of which he is president and treasurer. He was also vice-president of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company, and president of the Livingston Club for many years. Mr. Ormrod is a stalwart patriot, a gentleman of the highest standing, and a true friend of the National Guard.

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT, COLONEL JAMES H. BIGGER, COMMANDING.

After a rest period of a couple of months, drilling has been again resumed and the members are attending in goodly numbers. The work on the rifle range this summer has been most satisfactory, and with still one month left of the season the regiment has already had 670 men on the range, being an average of 55 men per company.

The regimental matches which were held this month were won as follows: Experts' match, Company K, Captain Kuhn, Commanding; Marksman's Match, Company K, Captain Kuhn, Commanding; Heeren Bros.' Trophy, Company K, Captain Kuhn, Commanding.

The highest individual score in the experts' match on four ranges, 200, 600, skirmish and 1,000, was made by First Sergeant W. L. Egy, Company E, score 216.

The highest individual score in the marksman's match on three ranges, 200, 300, 500 yards, was made by Private C. L. Rebenack, Company K, score being 122.

The highest score (individual) in the Heeren Bros.' trophy match was made by Private R. E. Ashton, (109), Company K, ranges 200, rapid fire and 600 yards.

The winner of the N. R. A. match was Sergeant W. L. Egy, Company E, with a score of 142 on the 200, 300 and 500 yards ranges, having made a possible on the 500-yard range.

The regiment participated in the military parade on Thursday, September 25, 1913, in celebration of the "Old Home Week" of Allegheny county, one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary, which was also the eighty-second anniversary of the Duquesne Greys, Eighteenth Regiment, and with the exception of two or three companies, each company had its full quota of men out. In the evening the Eighteenth Regiment Band gave a concert which was followed by a speech by General Albert J. Logan, commanding the Second Brigade, N. G. P., and one by Colonel Bigger. Following the speeches came the vaudeville entertainment and then the dance. In all, it was a most successful reunion of present members, ex-members of this regiment and their friends. A large number of visitors in the city inspected "our beautiful home," situated in the Schenley Farms.

NOTES FROM ABROAD.

An officer of Yeomanry, in addressing his troops, made a stirring allusion to the medals worn by some veterans in the ranks. One of the volunteers went home in a very thoughtful frame of mind, and the following week appeared for drill with several medals on his breast. Said one of his companions: "I didn't know you had seen service."

"No, I ain't," said the man.

"Well, how about the medals? They can't be yours."

"Can't they? Aye, but they be. Oor auld coo won 'em at th' cattle show."

Russian Official: "You cannot stay in this country."

Traveler: "Then I will leave it."

Russian Official: "Have you a passport to leave?"

Traveler: "No."

Russian Official: "Then you cannot leave. I'll give you twenty-four hours to decide what you will do."

The German Emperor delights to surround himself at the grand parades with four "colonelles." These noble warriors are the Empress, his daughter the Princess Victoria Louise, the Princess of Schaumburg-Lippe, and the Grand Duchess of Hesse-Darmstadt. Accompanied by these four Amazons, the Emperor passes before the regiment, and the crowd gives voice to its admiration.

The "colonelles" are, in fact, superb attractions in their striking uniforms. The Princess Sophia of Prussia, sister of the Emperor and wife of King Constantine of Greece, shares the military taste of her sister-in-law, the Empress, and has retained her title of colonelle of the grenadier regiment of the Prussian Guard.

The Empress of Russia, born Princess Alix of Hesse, is chief of the regiment of Uhlans and of the dragoon regiment of the Prussian Guard; Princess Marie of Roumania is "colonelle" of the Rochiori regiment, and the Queen Mother, Marguerite of Italy, does not conceal her pride that she is chief of a battalion of Prussian chasseurs.

Harrison R. Fehr, a former Guardsman and one of the organizers of the Easton City Guard, has been elected president of the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, which is one of the best known transportation companies in the United States. Mr. Fehr was for some years in charge of the management of the Easton Transit Company, which recently became part of the Lehigh Valley Transit Company's system. His career has been one of unusual success and he is regarded as a man of rare executive attainments. Colonel Harry C. Trexler, Quartermaster General of Pennsylvania, is the chairman of the board of directors of the company. The other officers of the company are: vice president, Edward M. Young; secretary and treasurer, Charles M. Wagner; auditor, C. M. Walter. Board of Directors: Charles H. Bean, Philadelphia; John C. Dawson, Philadelphia; George H. Frazier, Philadelphia; Charles E. Ingersoll, Philadelphia; Charles M. Schwab, South Bethlehem; Edward B. Smith, Philadelphia; Warren A. Wilbur, South Bethlehem; Edward M. Young, Allentown; Colonel Harry C. Trexler, chairman of the board.

The Third Brigade of New Jersey, commanded by General Mathers, and which consists of only two regiments, it is said, will probably be abolished. If the report is correct, it would indicate that New Jersey would take the same stand as Connecticut in reorganizing her Guard. In some quarters it is stated that General Mathers, who is a well known and efficient officer, will be placed on the retired list with the rank of Major General.

THE LATE HERMAN SIMON.

Residents of Easton paid a remarkable tribute to the memory of the late Captain Herman Simon, when more than 15,000 men, women and children filed by his coffin on the day of the funeral, September 30. Captain Simon was one of the leading manufacturers of Easton, and renowned in the silk industry throughout the world. He was famous for his philanthropies, which were in large measure guided by the benevolent spirit of his highly esteemed widow. In the early days of his career, Captain Simon was a cadet captain of the German Artillery Corps. As an American citizen he was a staunch supporter of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

GUARD REORGANIZATION.

The citizens of the Bethlehems have long been highly esteemed for their military spirit, and during the trying days of the Civil War furnished more than their quota of troops to the nation. In many cases the portion was greater than that of other communities which boasted of far larger population. The Northampton county men distinguished themselves in many of the severe engagements and were famous for their valor. Prior to the war, there existed several militia organizations in the county, but these were practically only skeleton companies that were later absorbed by the volunteer regiments. For many years the Bethlehems were without a protective military force. During the eighties a number of prominent young men of the towns organized the Bethlehem Rifles. The members of this independent company armed and equipped themselves at a personal expense that astonished many of the Guard officials. This company endeavored at various times to obtain admission to the Fourth Regiment, but were unsuccessful. The company participated in a number of encampments, held its regular weekly trials and was looked upon as a very efficient military body, but after an existence of over ten years the officers and members realized the futility of their efforts to become an authorized company of citizen soldiery and finally concluded to disband, although quite a number of the individuals entered the National Guard, serving with distinction. Among the prominent organizers of this early company was Arnon P. Miller, vice president of the E. P. Wilbur Trust Company, son-in-law of Brigadier General D. S. Lehr, who for many years commanded the Fourth Infantry. There was no official military representation in the Bethlehems until 1898, when, during the Spanish-American War, Captain Henry Adams, brother of Major Joseph W. Adams, organized an infantry company of over 100 men, which was assigned to the Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. This regiment was commanded by Colonel C. Bow Dougherty, now Major General. After the Spanish-American War and the reorganization of the Guard, most of these volunteer companies were mustered out or merged into the original regiments.

The new company of infantry in the Bethlehems is therefore the first to be admitted as an authorized part of the Pennsylvania State Troops, and will be assigned to Colonel O'Neill's Fourth Infantry as Company L. The company will start out with an enrollment of its full quota. The prospective officers are Captain, W. R. Coyle; First Lieutenant, Franklin Cole; Second Lieutenant, H. W. Mack; First Sergeant, Harry P. Burd, and Quartermaster Sergeant, John Shank. Captain Coyle is a former naval officer and a prominent business man of Bethlehem. Lieutenant Cole is a former member of the Easton City Guard, Company I, Thirteenth Infantry, and at present is the Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant, Fourth Infantry. Second Lieutenant Mack is a prominent officer in the Second Regiment, Sons of Veterans. The two sergeants are both old Guardsmen and familiar with their respective duties.

The establishment of the new company, and the probable transfer of Company I, Thirteenth Infantry, to Colonel O'Neill's Fourth Regiment, appear to be steps toward the reorganization of the Guard. As a result of the changes, Colonel O'Neill will have three battalions of four companies.

The following list, comprising the survivors of the "Bellefonte Fencibles," Company H, Second Regiment, P. V. I., who enlisted in the three months' service during the Civil War has been compiled by Abram V. Miller, of Pleasant Gap. The Bellefonte Fencibles were the first volunteers to leave Bellefonte and Centre county for the front in '61, under Captain Andrew Gregg Curtin, with Lieutenant James A. Beaver. The present muster roll is as follows: Hon. James A. Beaver, Bellefonte; John L. Johnston, Philadelphia; Hezekiah Dixon, Milesburg; William J. Hart, Pittsburgh; Allison Haupt, Tyrone; Murt Mayes, Snow Shoe; John T. Jack, Iowa; Walter S. Johnson, New York; Abram V. Miller, Pleasant Gap; H. H. Montgomery, Bellefonte; Henry C. Pennington, Kansas; George Rowan, Blair county; Henry Stone, Williamsport; Josiah Stewart, Iowa; Isaac Thomas, Bellefonte; James Waddle, Lock Haven; James Dobbins, Bellefonte; Joseph Snell, Jr., Binghamton, N. J.

The death of the late Colonel Thomas H. Maginniss, who commanded the Third Regiment during the period of the Homestead riots, has removed a well-known officer from the activities of life. Colonel Maginniss was a veteran of the Civil War and served both the nation and the State with distinction. He was identified with the Third Infantry for many years, and it was largely through his influence that General Morrell was induced to accept the colonelcy of that command. Of recent years, he was active in veteran associations, and not very long ago was appointed upon a committee, by Colonel Biddle, to plan for the organization of a veteran corps for the Third Regiment.

It is reported that Major Abel M. MacReynolds, of the Sixth Infantry, will shortly retire owing to pressure of private business. In this event, it is probable that Captain William T. Earl, of Company F, and former Captain, now the First Lieutenant, and Battalion Adjutant E. Oliver Mahon, will be considered for the succession. Both of these officers have had a long experience in the Guard and are well qualified for the position.

Sergeant Albin Krebs, formerly of the Regular Army, but more recently of the Third Infantry, is again winning distinction as a marksman. Sergeant Krebs had thirty years of experience in the Regular Army, and served for some time in the Philippines.

EDITORIAL.

It is to be hoped that the National Guard Association of the United States, at its annual meeting in Chicago, in October, will agree upon some plan by which the pay bill for attendance at drill may become a reality. As has been pointed out on numerous occasions in our columns, it would be a splendid investment on the part of the Federal Government to set aside funds for this purpose. With compensation assured for the officers and men who give their time to the service, it would naturally be expected that recruiting would be less difficult and in consequence the nation would be assured of a great reserve force for defense. Some doubt has been expressed as to the stability of the organized militia, but in answer to this it is well worth while to recall the excellent results obtained during the annual encampments in which the detailed army officers have always lauded the work; the camps of instruction for officers, likewise much praised, and, probably most important of all, the small arms practice, which in point of developed efficiency is equal to that of the regular establishment. Recently a prominent officer suggested that it would be a splendid move for the country were President Wilson to add a Secretary of Militia to his cabinet and to appoint someone of the standing of Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, to the position. This action, he said, would give the President a direct adviser regarding the citizen soldiery of the country, which in the event of emergencies would mean so much for the protection of the nation. Naturally, it would be expected that there would be no conflict between the new cabinet official and the Secretary of War and that both men would work in harmony. With the creation of the new position, however, it would likewise be anticipated that the success of the pay bill would be assured. The delay in approving this measure has long been a mystery to the militia. There appears to be no opposition to the bill, except in a limited official circle, while, on the other hand, the public sentiment is practically unanimous in its favor.

NOTES

As a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is regarded, Captain Harry P. Vercoe is to be tendered a dinner by the Board of Governors of Company C, Sixth Infantry, at the Washington House, Chester, on October 7, on the eve of his retirement from active service. Captain Vercoe is one of the best equipped officers of the Guard and his withdrawal from the service will be deeply regretted. He is a thorough Guardsman and a true soldier.

Company I, Fourteenth Infantry, has sustained a severe loss through the recent death of Second Lieutenant Harry N. Lindsay. Lieutenant Lindsay was an efficient and devoted officer and a splendid type of National Guardsman.

Colonel Joseph B. Hutchison, Eighth Infantry, has been particularly fortunate in having only a few changes in the personnel of his officers. The staff has been practically identical in this regiment for some time.

A field vacancy in the Sixteenth Infantry will shortly occur through the retirement of Major Clyde D. Wilcox, who like many other officers has found that business obligations make it necessary for him to give up active duties. Captain Charles F. Clyde, of Company B, Captain Henry N. Pudenz, of Company G, and Captain Frederick P. Schoonmaker, of Company C, are mentioned for the succession.

PICTURE SWINDLES.

As a result, the picture collections of Pierpont Morgan, Harriman and other models of business shrewdness have been found by connoisseurs to contain palpable forgeries. In one particular case, a "Botticelli" for which a heavy sum had been given, the expert pointed out that the painting was executed in oil colors. Botticelli painted in tempera.

Through the port of New York close on 30,000 reputed "Corots" have paid customs duty. Allowing Corot a working day of twelve hours right through the year, he must have spent about two hundred busy years at the easel.

Very often the swindler builds on more than the self-conceit of his rich clients. He whispers that the valuable antique is being offered at a bargain price because it was stolen from a museum or private collection, or rifled from an Egyptian tomb or Grecian temple. What sympathy can one extend to those who buy under such conditions?

The laws of Italy are very strict against the removal of home-born artistic treasures without the sanction of the Government. An antiquary in Rome told the writer that a very usual dodge of the unscrupulous Italian dealer is to import antiques, which do not come under the guardianship of the law, and then whisper to the client that they can be smuggled out of Italy by secretly bribing the customs officials. The dealer, by undertaking to do this, throws an extra glamor on the treasure. The rich gull pays for bribes which are never given, and the money remains in the dealer's pocket. Again, what claim has the victim on one's sympathies.

Faked Old Furniture.

The faking of pictures, furniture, and ancient documents has almost reached to the dignity of an art. The effect of age is given to paintings by suitably smoking them or staining with liquorice juice. "Fly specks" are squirted on with a mixture of Indian ink and adhesive gum. The "signature" of the painter may be grimed over so as to afford the collector the joy of cleaning and uncovering the name. The frame will be worm-holed by gouges or by firing small shot into it. The wood of the frame can be antiquated by the action of ammonia juices; or an even more stylish device is to lay the wood it pits covered with earth, decaying leaves, and salts of ammonia, and age it by the process of Nature quickened to rag-time.

This latter dodge applies to material for "ancient furniture" as well as to picture frames. Practically any age and style of furniture can be faked by the craftsmen who specialize in that profitable game.

Ancient documents also. On several occasions rich men on the lookout for bargains have been induced to purchase what purported to be discoveries of Gospel manuscripts—in one instance, even a revised version of the Ten Commandments. The paper was genuine enough, being obtained by clipping the margins of Syrian "scrolls of the law," and on this the forger set down his flights of fancy.
